Buy Many Stamps In Our Local Schools To Aid in Defense

The first three Defense Stamp Days in the Northfield public schools resulted in the sale of approximately $200 worth of stamps to the pupils. This project is in charge of Richard A. Cobb, principal of the high school who is being assisted by Principal George Leonard of Center school and the local Defense Savings committee have expressed their gratitude to these two men for their enthusiastic cooperation which has produced such a splendid result.

Reports coming in from various parts of the country indicate that the school children of America are beginning to play an important part in national defense through this program. One of the important by-products of this widespread savings program is a revival of belief in the virtue of thrift. Thousands of schools which maintained banking service for pupils were forced to discontinue it during the depression and there was small incentive to revive it during the spendthrift days that followed. The Defense Savings program which retains the thrift and education features of school banking and adds the important note of patriotism is sweeping the country.

It is expected that before the end of the school year many of the older pupils will have accumulated enough stamps to convert them into bonds. The Defense Savings staff in Washington points out that this should be the aim of every person purchasing stamps since the latter are worth only their face value and may be lost or destroyed while the bonds draw interest and are registered as a protection against loss or destruction.

Information about any phase of the Defense savings program may be secured at the public defense meeting at town hall tonight where a Defense Savings booth will be set up in the lobby with members of the committee in charge.

"Fear Not To Speak," Said Dr. Kinsolving

The Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving of Princeton, N. J., for many years associated with Amherst college and then with Trinity church of Boston, was the speaker at Mount Hermon chapel service last Sunday morning. Members of the Greenfield Kiwanis club were among those present in the large audience. Many officers and delegates from a score of Mt. Hermon alumni clubs in the east wound up their weekend conference at the school by attending the service.

Dr. Kinsolving bemoaned the attitude of so many people who dare not speak out against the evils that exist on every hand. Such people fear to offend, but in so doing, they share in the responsibility for the existence of these evils. "We have neglected the idea of the severity of God while accepting the goodness of God," the speaker asserted.

"We are more interested in being a little worse morally than others instead of being better. On such topics as the making of money, on divorce, and on war, we are reluctant to speak out our minds in opposition. We look upon God in a mild manner way instead of noting His severity. The excuse that we intend to be merciful does not hold because Christ was as severe with his friends as He was with His enemies in wrong doing.

"Christ's type of love is not being quiet about evil, for He resisted all evil that harmed others. As Christians we must be willing to resist actively all evil wherever we see it. It is such courage that we need today."

The American Youth Hostel movement founded by Monroe and Isabel Smith has made rapid progress in the past few years and hostels may be found now in several sections of the country. The oldest chain of hostels are in New England and presided over by William A. Nelson, who is the regional director. Headquarters have been maintained in Northfield for the movement with a staff of workers, and during the course of the year, many visitors arrive to learn something of the organization, to get information or to enroll in its activities. In addition to headquarters, the local hostel has a home of its own, which also contains the living quarters of the directors. There is also a staff house, where those who enlist in training course reside as well as staff members.

It was decided to hold the benefit the third week in November and committees were named to carry on the project. Full particulars will be given later in an issue of the Press.

Clothing For Relief Is Being Solicited

Many weeks ago, Mrs. E. M. Powell, undertook the task of collecting good clothing that could be used abroad, primarily for British War Relief, and had placed a barrel on the porch at the IGA store and at her home. Already she has sent some 17 boxes to Boston to the warehouse delivery being made free of charge by Mr. Daignault of Greenfield. Since Bundles for Britain will confine itself to the making of new garments, Mrs. Powell will continue the collection of clothes and another barrel will be placed in front of the Northfield Pharmacy, for the conveniences of friends in that section. So if any person has any good old garments that might be of further service to others abroad, and are worth the effort and cost of sending, do them up in a bundle and put them in one of the barrels or leave them at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fitt.

County Church Club Hears Dr. Weigle Talk On The Future Peace

A number of members of the local Congregational church who are members of the Congregational club of Franklin county were in attendance at the fall dinner meeting at the Weldon hotel on Tuesday evening. I. J. Lawrence and Mrs. Martha Lopez were the soloists. Rev. E. C. Dahl was elected a member. There were over 100 present. Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean of Yale Divinity school, was the guest speaker. In the course of his talk, he said, "We have been slow to realize our relation to the momentous issue which confronts the world, and which is: 'Shall human freedom perish from the earth?' Most of us are soberly awake now to that relation, but it was only in the light of such a statement that we could be expected to rally our strength. Now the old assumption of complete isolation is quietly and permanently being outgrown, and we are resolved to put our house in order and take our place in the free fellowship of free nations. We shall not yield to Nazi domination, but more important than all, we must know that deeper than our faith in democracy must be our faith in God."

Rev. H. B. Morrell of Turners Falls, president of the club, presided at the meeting.

Bundle Your Paper Boy Scouts Want It

Next week is waste paper week and everywhere throughout the state, in the various counties, the Boy Scouts plan to collect the old waste paper which is lying around our homes. They will begin the canvass on Monday, and will appreciate the bundling of old paper and magazines by our citizens, and placing it on the back porch of your home where they can get it whether you are at home or away. However they do ask that you phone E. J. Livington on Highland avenue or Louis Abbey on Warwick avenue that your bundle is ready. This will avoid the ringing of every door bell. They want all your old newspapers, magazines and old books to send in as part of the plan of conservation in aid of the government and incidentally to profit by its sale. To get any sort of a satisfactory price, quantity is needed and delivery made by the truck load. Now everybody give the boys a boost, they will work hard to accomplish the task. Incidentally they will also be glad to have any old metals, iron, copper, brass, etc., to accumulate for delivery.

A special prayer was used and the audience of boys and masters joined in the hymn often called for by Mr. Speer, "This is My Master's World" by Matie D. Babcock. Mix sweetened condensed milk and coconut. Add either dates, prunes or apricots, which have been finely chopped. Drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheet, about 1 inch apart. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 10 minutes or until a delicate brown. Remove from pan at once. Makes about 30. Sweetened condensed milk works like magic in making crunchy cookies that are failure-proof.

"I guess my father must have been a pretty mischievous boy," said one youngster.

"Why?" inquired the other. "Because he knows exactly what questions to ask when he wants to know what I have been doing."

A sure recipe for party morale is to plan easy-to-learn games that every one can take part in. The newest game is called "I Spy," a fast-moving blend of Michigan, rummy, etc. with a circular Banana cloth that happily eliminates all memory exactioms. Dig is another party game favorite that is easy-to-learn; you scramble for letters in a "gold mine" with little miner's picks.

EDITORIAL

TIME FOR ACTION

The President has spoken, and his words give a clear interpretation of the situation of America in the present world conflict. It is inevitable that we shall become a part of it. We have not agreed with the domestic policies of the administration in the years gone by, but when it comes to a matter of national policy in foreign affairs, the President must be given our whole support regardless of our party affiliation. Right or wrong, I am for America first and last and believe appeasement or isolation can never accomplish anything. Make America strong, send out her ships across the seas, repeat the limitations and let's face the future with courage. We need men in Washington, who love America more and hate Roosevelt less.

HOW ABOUT IT?

With the nearing completion of the new highway through the East Northfield sector of our town, we have been given the privilege of driving over it, and of such quality is its surface that the temptation is to "step on it," as our car glides along. The 25-mile limit means nothing and there is every indication, from observation that most car drivers forget they are passing along and within thickly settled sections. It is apparent that we must become traffic conscious and regulate our speed accordingly. If this is not done voluntarily, something must come to pass, to compel us and all others to drive along moderately.

PRECAUTION

As the cold weather is upon us and we begin the running of fires for comfort in our homes, Arthur P. Fitt admonishes the public that serious attention should be given to our water supplies, that pipes should run free and be protected from the freezing, that our heaters and their flues should be in good condition, without any nearby accumulation of rubbish, that cellars should be clean and kept so that electrical equipment should be in good condition. The cold weather has its risks, and the risk is fire, which no one wants. So prepare accordingly and avert any disaster.

The Back Yard Gardener
By G. O. Olson

Well, folks, October is almost a thing of the past for another year, and I must say that in our neck of the woods we've had our share of bright blue weather with all the colors. Speaking of colors I heard one lady describing fall foliage. She used this term "luscious purplish plum shades which are to be seen throughout the winter." I think that is one of the best descriptions of fall color that I've ever come across.

You know there's an old saying that "What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." But in this particular case it doesn't work out. The weather has been grand for me personally, and as a matter of fact it has done pretty well by my fall seeding. But for the folks down on the farm—well, it's not so good. With the labor situation already tough, having to cart water makes it that much tougher. And if the weather man doesn't relent and give us some good heavy rains before freezing up time—well, it'll be just too bad.

And just in case the good weather is lulling you to sleep, I might remind you that your evergreens, particularly the smaller ones, could stand some watering—that is, if you can spare it. Next summer, if I am any guesser, there will be plenty of queries as to what's the matter with my evergreen. It's turning brown. And nine times out of ten, the answer is going to be lack of water last winter.

So just to be on the safe side I'm giving my young evergreens a few buckets of water every few days, so that they won't be too hard hit in case Old Man Winter arrives before Jupiter Pluvius supplies us with plenty of water.

There's another reminder in case you've forgotten it. There is still time to plant small flowering bulbs for next spring. And here are just a few suggestions which I picked up from a nurseryman.

All bulbs like good drainage. Narcissus and tulips should be covered about six inches and the smaller bulbs about half that depth. Crocus, grape hyacinths and scillas need to be covered about two to three inches. Naturally you're going to plant the earliest flowering bulbs first, but narcissus and tulips, even if planted in late November, will flower well.

I think it's also a good idea to do a little naturalizing where you can let the foliage mature before the grass is cut. Narcissus, especially the short-trumpet type, are good for this purpose. Crocus, scillas, and grape hyacinths are also fine.

In your bulb bed it's well to supply some fertilizer. If you use barnyard manure, be sure that it's well decayed and be sure to add some finely ground bone meal. That's excellent for all hardy bulbs.

Narcissus and virtually all of the little bulbs stand considerable shade. Hyacinths and tulips need more sunshine. An ordinary round trowel is the best planting tool for anything in the Dutch bulb.

As this nurseryman said, you can spruce up an otherwise hideous evergreen doorway planting by adding a few tulips and daffodils and other bulbs.

As he says, there is the perennial question of what's the difference between a daffodil and a jonquil and a narcissus. According to him, narcissus is the Latin name for the entire family. True jonquils are either golden yellow or orange with several small blooms to a stalk, with fine grass-like foliage, and a delicious fragrance. Daffodils include practically all other types from the big trumpet types to the little flat trumpet types.

But if any of your friends insist on calling jonquils, daffodils, or vice versa, don't get into an argument about it. Just smile and let them find out for themselves the difference.

Know Massachusetts
by State Planning Board

You know that the city of Boston in 1939 did 73 per cent of all the wholesale business of the state. The first federal census of Massachusetts was taken in 1790 returning a population of 378,787; the 1940 census shows 4,816,721. The washing bill of Massachusetts people in 1939 included $19,000,000 of work done by the power laundries. Our great-great-grandmothers knew nothing of highboys, grandfather's clock, low daddy, Lady Washington chairs, courting mirrors, fiddle back chairs, or donkey eared spindle backs. These names are inventions of collectors or antique dealers striving for the picturesque. The 1940 census reports 31,897 farms in Massachusetts, an increase of 24.6 per cent over 1930. 52 per cent of the farms were under mortgage and the average age of the owner was 53.6 years. Massachusetts was the only New England colony to Simple check-up of oil burners will avoid waste. A thermostat set at 68 degrees will save fuel. Fast savings from cleaning your oil burner. Elimination of drafts will conserve heat.

For minimizing drafts, repair outside walls. Open fireplaces without fitting damper steal heat. Remember to caulk windows and door frames.

Do not forget good weather stripping saves fuel. Very tightly fitted storm window saves fuel. For further saving insulate top floor ceiling. Every boiler should be properly insulated. No crevices between flooring and basements. Save fuel—lower thermostat 10 degrees at night. Every radiator checked for faulty air valves.

The above advice, secured by Myron Dunnell, our oil dealer is furnished the Press and published.

Net income for nine months were $5,386,805 as compared with $786,863 for the period last year.
